

Physician Assistant Program Director – Martinsburg Campus

Mountain State University is a rapidly growing and dynamic institution with more than five campuses enrolling nearly 8,000 students in its traditional and non-traditional programs. The University is currently seeking an energetic individual to serve as the Physician Assistant Program Director for the newly created PA Program at the Martinsburg, West Virginia campus. Established in 1999, MSU Martinsburg has become a thriving educational resource within the Quad-State region. As a reflection of the University's commitment to accessible higher education, the campus's programs offer flexible learning opportunities that are within the time constraints and economic reach of working adults.

The new Program Director will be responsible for all functions related to the accreditation of the Master of Science in Physician Assistant Program, as well as preparing and presenting course curriculum, building and developing qualified faculty and staff, and implementing a marketing plan to ensure maximum enrollment for the program. Reporting to the Dean for Health Sciences at the Beckley Campus, the new director will oversee all aspects of program development and supervision of faculty and students enrolled in the program at the Martinsburg campus.

The successful candidate must have an earned Master's degree in this field of study and a national certification and licensure as a Physician Assistant. A minimum of two years of clinical experience and at least one year of experience in an academic setting is required. Candidates should be effective communicators and team players, with strong organizational, administrative, and problem solving skills. Excellent benefits are available for all University employees.

Martinsburg is located on the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia, just 95 miles from the Washington, D.C. and Baltimore areas. The city is growing immensely, with an influx of people from the metropolitan area. Berkeley County, of which Martinsburg is the county seat, has a current population of approximately 100,000.

Founded in 1933 as a private, independent university in Beckley, West Virginia, Mountain State has enjoyed strong leadership and financial stability and is poised for continued growth and success. The University remains committed to its founding philosophy that every individual should have the opportunity to obtain an education and maximize his or her human potential.
